

Chapter 1

The Dursleys, a wealthy family in Surrey, England, are highly concerned with their social standing. They feel embarrassed by Mrs. Dursley's peculiar sister, Mrs. Potter, whom Mrs. Dursley has pretended not to know for years. One ordinary morning, as Mr. Dursley is on his way to work, he spots a cat reading a map. This sight unsettles him, but he dismisses it as his imagination.

However, while waiting in traffic, Mr. Dursley notices people dressed in colorful cloaks. Later, while passing by a bakery, he overhears excited conversations about his sister-in-law's family, the Potters, and their one-year-old son, Harry. Although disturbed, Mr. Dursley remains unsure if anything is amiss and decides not to mention it to his wife. On his way home, he unexpectedly encounters a peculiarly dressed man who cheerfully announces that someone known as "You-Know-Who" has finally met their end, and even a "Muggle" like Mr. Dursley should rejoice. Meanwhile, the news is filled with unusual reports of shooting stars and daytime owl sightings.

When the Dursleys are about to fall asleep, Albus Dumbledore, a wizard and the head of Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry, appears on their street. He extinguishes all the streetlights and approaches a cat, who is revealed to be Professor McGonagall in disguise, a fellow teacher at Hogwarts. They discuss the disappearance of You-Know-Who, also known as Voldemort. Dumbledore informs McGonagall that Voldemort had killed the Potter parents the previous night and attempted to kill their son, Harry, but failed. He further reveals that Voldemort's power seemed to diminish after his unsuccessful attempt on Harry's life, causing him to retreat. Dumbledore explains that the infant Harry can be left on the Dursleys' doorstep. McGonagall protests, believing that the Dursleys are unfit to raise Harry. However, Dumbledore insists that there is no one else available to care for the child and states that when Harry is older, he will learn about his destiny.

Suddenly, a giant named Hagrid, carrying a bundle of blankets containing baby Harry, descends from the sky on a motorcycle. Dumbledore takes Harry and places him on the Dursleys' doorstep along with a letter explaining everything, and then the three part ways.

Chapter 2

A decade has passed, and Harry, now nearing eleven years old, endures a miserable existence confined to a cupboard beneath the stairs in the Dursley residence. The Dursleys' son, Dudley, a petulant and entitled child, delights in tormenting Harry. One morning, Harry's aunt, Petunia, abruptly wakes him, demanding that he prepare bacon promptly, as it is Dudley's birthday and everything must be flawless. Dudley grows incensed upon discovering he has received only thirty-seven presents, one fewer than the previous year. To make matters worse, a neighbor cancels her plans to watch Harry for the day, causing Dudley to wail in distress since he despises the idea of bringing Harry along on his birthday outing to the zoo.

At the zoo, the Dursleys lavish attention on Dudley and his friend Piers while ignoring Harry. In the reptile house, Harry becomes fascinated by a boa constrictor and is astonished to discover that he can communicate with it. Piers notices and calls Mr. Dursley and Dudley over. Dudley shoves Harry aside to get a better look at the snake. Suddenly, the glass barrier of the enclosure vanishes, allowing the boa constrictor to slither out. Dudley and Piers falsely claim that the snake attacked them. The Dursleys are left bewildered.

Back home, Harry is punished and locked in his cupboard without food, even though he believes he did nothing wrong.

Chapter 3

After the boa constrictor incident, Harry remains confined until summer. He spends much of his time outside to avoid Dudley and his gang. He looks forward to starting a new school in the fall, where he will finally be away from Dudley.

One day, Uncle Vernon asks Harry to fetch the mail. Harry notices a letter addressed to him at "The Cupboard under the Stairs." Uncle Vernon snatches it away, shocked. The next day, Vernon moves Harry into Dudley's second bedroom but refuses to discuss the letter.

More letters arrive, each precisely addressed to wherever Harry is staying. Vernon grows increasingly desperate, nailing shut the mail slot, but letters continue flooding the house. The family flees to a hotel, then to a remote island shack to escape the letters. As midnight approaches on Harry's eleventh birthday, a loud knock sounds at the door.

Chapter 4

A giant man bursts in, easily bending Uncle Vernon's gun into a knot. He introduces himself as Hagrid, Keeper of Keys and Grounds at Hogwarts. He is furious that the Dursleys never told Harry he is a wizard. Hagrid gives Harry his Hogwarts acceptance letter and reveals that Harry's parents were murdered by Voldemort, not killed in a car crash. Harry begins to understand that his strange experiences were acts of magic. Ignoring Vernon's protests, Hagrid takes Harry away.

Chapter 5

Harry and Hagrid travel to London to buy school supplies. Hagrid reassures Harry that his parents left him money in Gringotts, the wizard bank run by goblins. They visit the Leaky Cauldron, where many wizards recognize Harry. Hagrid reveals Diagon Alley by tapping bricks in a wall.

At Gringotts, Harry sees his parents' fortune. Hagrid also retrieves a mysterious package from vault 713. Harry buys school supplies and meets a proud boy who speaks highly of pure-blood wizard families. At Ollivanders wand shop, Harry finds that a holly wand with a phoenix feather core chooses him. Ollivander explains that the phoenix feather came from the same phoenix that provided the feather for Voldemort's wand.

Chapter 6

On September 1, Uncle Vernon reluctantly takes Harry to King's Cross station and mocks platform nine and three-quarters. Harry finds the Weasley family, who help him pass through the barrier between platforms nine and ten. He boards the Hogwarts Express.

On the train, Harry befriends Ron Weasley and meets Hermione Granger. Ron explains wizard currency, Chocolate Frog cards, and Quidditch. Harry feels excited about beginning his new life.

Chapter 7

At Hogwarts, students are sorted into houses: Gryffindor, Hufflepuff, Ravenclaw, or Slytherin. Harry fears Slytherin but is sorted into Gryffindor, along with Ron and Hermione. Draco Malfoy is sorted into Slytherin. Dumbledore welcomes students and warns them about the Forbidden Forest and a forbidden third-floor corridor.

Chapter 8

Harry begins classes. He struggles in some subjects, particularly Potions, where Professor Snape treats him harshly. He receives a tea invitation from Hagrid and learns about a break-in at Gringotts that occurred the same day Hagrid retrieved the mysterious package.

Chapter 9

During flying lessons, Harry shows natural talent after catching Neville's Remembrall mid-air. Professor McGonagall recruits him as Gryffindor's Seeker, making him the youngest player in a century. Later, Harry, Ron, Hermione, and Neville accidentally discover a giant three-headed dog guarding a trapdoor.

Chapter 10

Harry receives a broomstick and begins Quidditch practice. On Halloween, a troll enters the castle. Harry and Ron save Hermione from it, and the three become close friends.

Chapter 11

During Harry's first Quidditch match, his broom behaves strangely. Hermione believes Snape is jinxing it and sets his robes on fire, breaking the spell. Harry catches the Golden Snitch and wins the match. Hagrid accidentally reveals the dog's name, Fluffy, and mentions Nicolas Flamel.

Chapter 12

For Christmas, Harry receives an invisibility cloak that once belonged to his father. He discovers the Mirror of Erised, which shows his deepest desire: his parents. Dumbledore explains that the mirror reflects desires and advises Harry not to dwell on it.

Chapter 13

Harry, Ron, and Hermione discover that Nicolas Flamel created the Sorcerer's Stone, which grants immortality and turns metal into gold. They suspect the stone is hidden beneath the trapdoor.

Chapter 14

Hagrid wins a dragon egg and raises it secretly. Harry and his friends help send the dragon, Norbert, away. They are caught and lose many house points. Later, during detention in the Forbidden Forest, Harry encounters a cloaked figure drinking unicorn blood. A centaur named Firenze rescues him and reveals the figure is Voldemort.

Chapter 15

Harry discovers Hagrid accidentally revealed how to get past Fluffy. Believing Snape will steal the stone, Harry, Ron, and Hermione decide to act. They pass through magical obstacles: a deadly plant, flying keys, a giant chessboard, and a potion riddle.

Chapter 16

Harry confronts Professor Quirrell, who reveals Voldemort living on the back of his head. Quirrell cannot touch Harry because of the protective magic from his mother's sacrifice. Harry defeats Quirrell and loses consciousness.

Chapter 17

Harry awakens in the hospital wing. Dumbledore explains that the stone has been destroyed and that Harry survived because of his mother's love. At the end-of-year feast, Dumbledore awards points to Ron, Hermione, Harry, and Neville, allowing Gryffindor to win the House Cup.

Harry returns to the Dursleys for the summer, looking forward to using a little harmless magic on Dudley.
